Introduction

This course aims to raise the level, linguistic as well as intellectual, of students' ability to read current English. The popular communicative approach has indeed made significant contribution in improving of our beginning students' oral communication, but its almost exclusive attention to lower level students has also inevitably diluted intellectual sophistication in more advanced English programs – especially at the graduate level. This course thus attempts to bring humanistic and intellectual concern to ESP in such areas as politics, economy & finance, environment, current events, and the arts. Hopefully, with an improvement in their English ability, our locally situated students will be able to entertain a global vision of the world enriched by emersion in such topics.
