Introduction

This course offers a freshman level introduction to some of the basic, general concepts, requirements and nomenclature involved in handling practical situations related to the Tourism and Hospitality industry.

Our studies include oral/written tourism-related terminology practice, discussions, video work and team/individual projects. Homework exercises will be assigned individually or as teams, requiring research, classification and documentation.

The primary goal of this course is to assist students in developing greater competence and confidence in handling travel/hospitality related conversations, as well as in understanding some simpler forms of communication that are used in this field.
