Introduction

The course will continue with extensive article reading. After that, interviewing and modern online journalistic skills and platforms will be discussed. Different journalistic styles and local as well as international news will be analyzed. This course is designed to introduce students to varied aspects of journalism as well as to provide the opportunity for students to create journalistic models through the production of materials, including the department newspaper. The students are expected to pursue excellence in communication skills and are given the opportunity to use technology in production and design. The students will understand the role mass media plays in the community and in our society.

Outline

In the second semester class project, the students will work as a team to produce the release of the English Department 's newspaper and a spoof TV news program.

Prerequisite

Prewriting, drafting, revising and polishing are stressed in this class. This course will also identify the professional skills and personal qualities required of a news reporter.
