Introduction

In this course, students will continue to take part in team debates. In addition to the constructive speeches and rebuttal speeches of the first semester course, they will learn the basics of cross examination, the question-and-answer process that is a standard part of most debate formats.

Outline

They will also learn various note taking strategies which will help them keep track of the ideas presented during a live debate. A major focus will be topic-related vocabulary and the functional English (e.g., common phrases and sentence structures) used during persuasive argumentation.

Prerequisite

Students will develop their skills in refutation by learning to identify logical fallacies in the opposing arguments. The debate teams will prepare for speeches and cross examinations by producing case outlines based on the stock issues.
