課程簡介

This course is designed to help the in-service or pre-service local EFL teachers to improve both their professional knowledge about ELT and the practical teaching skills they need to teach English in the local setting. Two major modules will be included in the course: 1) the presentation and explanation of the major ELT approaches and methods; 2) the demonstration (via film clips and the instructor's own demo), and critical analyses of the implementation of some of those commonly used ELT methods and techniques.

課程大綱

- I. Introduce to students the philosophy, principles and guidelines of the major EFL teaching approaches and methods.
- II. Demonstrate to students by using teaching films some most commonly used EFL teaching methods and techniques in all aspects of ELT, e.g. the four basic communicative skills, vocabulary, phonics, songs and games.
- III. Explain to students the pros and cons of local EFL teaching practices.
- IV. Introduce to students how to make the best use of the internet resources for their EFL teaching.

基本能力或先修課程

It is suggested that students who would like to take this course have a good command of basic English communication ability and some teaching experience, be it the ELT one or other non-English teaching one.
